PRICE $1 A YEAR.

Laut Brothers

APPLES! APPLES!! APPLES!!!

Our stock of winter Apples have arrived and are open for your inspection.

We have no hesitation in saying that a better Stock of Apples have never been shown in Crossfield.

They were grown in Wenatchee, Washington and consist of Rome Beauties and Jonathans, running largely to three and one half tier boxes, full, rich-colored, delicious fruit.

For the balance of this week we are offering our customers a chance to lay in their winter supply at the exceptionally low price of $2.00 per box.

This offer is for cash only and will not hold good after this week.

We also have in Stock a large quantity of Fall Apples for immediate use that we are offering at unusually low prices. Come in and let us talk Apples.

Local and General

Lewis Bliss was in from the Red Deer last week.

The weather man has again lost control of the weather.

J. S. Martin was a visitor in Lacombe the end of last week.

Dick Ontkes was a passenger to Calgary on Monday night's train.

LUMBER FOR SALE—Five thousand feet of A-1 Ship-lap, for sale at a bargain. Apply at this Office.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church held their meeting at the home of Mrs. Ledingham yesterday.

Meyers & Davis left with their large threshing outfit on Saturday for the north where they commenced threshing at the farm of S. Downie & Sons at Carstairs on Monday.

Wm. Martin returned last week from a stay of several weeks in Eastern Canada and the states. Mr. Martin reports having spent a very pleasant time in the east, but was glad to be back in Crossfield, and at once availed himself of the opportunity of a few days shooting.

Remember the day of Mrs. Curry's visit to Crossfield. Her store in the Cowling block will be open each Wednesday from 8 a. m. until 3:30 p. m.

Mellory & Sons now have charge of the hardware business formerly carried on by Ontkes & Armstrong, and we bespeak for them the same kind patronage as has been accorded the old firm. See their adv. in another column.

McPhee & Wicks have placed a large electric light in front of the livery barn, which lights up that street very nicely. These gentlemen have given the Village Council a very good illustration of how electricity will light our main street, and perhaps they will take the hint and have the streets lighted in the near future.

A Grand Concert under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church will be held in the I.O.O.F. Hall to-night. Fourteen Indian Children, and some local talent from Carstairs will comprise the troupe. A good evening's entertainment is promised.

Mrs. D. G. Harvie and children who have been spending the past three months with relatives and friends in the states and Ontario, returned home on Sunday morning. Mrs. Harvie reports very cold weather in Ontario for this time of year, and in spite of her acquaintance with the Alberta climate, was quite surprised to find such pleasant weather at home. Mr. Harvie met his family in Calgary. Dave is now staying in his corner.

Is This A Joke?

Of nothing are Crossfield people more proud than their fire brigade. They have a fire hall, two chemical fire engines, a squad of the most fleet and handsome men in town, and a well-trained bucket brigade, and altogether the town is well protected against fire, and Captains V. Fisher and W. Urquhart with their twenty men could give the Calgary brigade a few points.—Calgary Daily Herald.

Note and Comment

The Fire Hall is still empty.

The Crossfield Fire Brigade is sleeping.

And the Crossfield Village Council have as yet made no move to light our streets.

Every body are saving their dollars, and so are we. If you are a delinquent subscriber please bring in the dollar. We need it.

A goodly number of wild geese have been brought into Crossfield during the past few days by local sportsmen. Those who have gone across the Rosebud report the sport especially fine. (?)

Some very good Conservatives are now taking exception to the Cabinet chosen by Mr. Borden. Mr. Borden may not have much experience in Cabinet building but don't seem to feel inclined to take advice from any of his co-workers as regards the timber that will comprise his Cabinet.

President Taft is still deploring Canada's move in turning down the Reciprocity pact, and points out that the Americans know more about such an agreement than does Canada, because it is an older country. The President's friends should tell him that there are several countries that are hundreds of years older than Canada that are much behind her in the way of advancement.

This paper has for some weeks been asking the village Council through its columns to light the streets of Crossfield with the electric lights that are now at its disposal, but as far as we can learn no move in this direction has yet been made.
This idea of street lighting did not originate in the Chronicle office but was suggested by prominent business men of the town, and as a representative of the Crossfield public it feels that it is its duty to keep at the Village Council on this question until it wakes up to the fact that this is not talk, but business, and either places these lights on the streets or hands us some reason why it cannot be done. As far as we are able to learn no improvements of any importance have been executed in the village this season with the exception of the purchase of the fire engines and the building of the fire hall, which by the way are being allowed to stand without any use being made of either, and now when the opportunity has arisen whereby the village might have the streets lighted in the most up-to-date manner, at the least possible expense, no move of any kind is being made by them to have it done. It is high time the town woke up or went to sleep for good.

And still the coal strike remains unsettled.

America's Greatest Singer, Madame Lillian Nordica, To Visit Calgary Oct. 30th

To the many music lovers of the west it will be a matter of interest to know that Lillian Nordica, the greatest of America's singers, will sing in Calgary on Thanksgiving night Oct. 30th, in Central Methodist Church. Nordica recently sang in Salt Lake City at the reception of President Taft and later in San Francisco, on each occasion receiving tremendous applause. She will shortly visit a few Canadian cities traveling in her private car. She is coming to Calgary under the auspices of the Young Men's Club, of Central Church, this will give Crossfield music lovers an excellent chance to hear Nordica. Seats are $4.00, $3.00 and $2.00, they may be secured by writing the Young Men's Club.

A Post For The Alberta Hotel

Mr. Donald Gillies, License Inspector for this district was in town on Tuesday last inspecting The Alberta Hotel here. Mr. Gillies says that this hotel is one of the best managed and cleanest hotels in the province, and that if all hotel men would run their business on the same principle as Messrs. Peters & Barter, they would not now be facing the cry against the liquor traffic and that the town to the north of us would not be trying so hard for Local Option. When asked by a representative of the Chronicle, what in his opinion would be the outcome of the Local Option campaign that is being carried on in the north, said that it was a very absorbing question with them up there, and that he believed that it would carry on the C. & E. line, but might be defeated in the towns in the eastern part of the province, so that the result was very uncertain. This question will be voted upon about November 30th.

The Golden Opportunity

Among the persons who have recently made provision for old age when it comes are two sisters aged respectively 33 and 34 years. They have purchased from the Canadian Government a Last Survivor Annuity, that is an Annuity which will give them together an income of $600 a year so long as they both live, and to be continued to the survivor so long as she lives. The cost of this Annuity, $4,643.65, has been invested at 5 per cent and has brought in less than $185.00 annually, with the difficulty and annoyance of re-investment. The Annuity becomes payable when the younger sister attains the age of 55, and should both die before that time the purchase money will be refunded to their heirs with 3 per cent compound interest.

Each is now earning her own living and the sum paid is the fruit of their labours for a number of years. They were thus able the better to appreciate their splendid opportunity. A card of enquiry addressed to the Superintendent of Canadian Government Annuities, Ottawa, will secure for you any information you desire on the subject.

AN ARBITER OF FATE

Gamaliel Swallows an Ancient Separation

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, Inc.

"Here comes Aunt Alvaretta," said Miss Letitia from her seat in the blue library. "I wonder what has happened. She got her hat hood on over her sweeping cap, and she is running across the orchard."

Mrs. Parsons leaned over her daughter's shoulder and peered at the tall angular figure hurrying through the orchard that divided the two houses. "Why Gamaliel! What's gotten into her? That cat will be the death of Alvaretta with his fits and flunks; ways she's worried over him half the time. I'll open the door for her and let her go to the side porch and wait till her sister's coming."

Alvaretta came up the narrow path between the rows of chrysanthemum her prunella shoes feet flashing in and out of the dead leaves and her faded face quite pink with excitement. "Is it Gamaliel?" called Mrs. Parsons eagerly as her sister drew near.

Miss Lee stopped short and stared. "Is it Gamaliel?" called Mrs. Parsons eagerly as her sister drew near.

"I thought perhaps that cat had no other life," returned Mrs. Parsons sharply. "he's always cutting up some sort of a fool."

"Gamaliel's all right," assured Alvaretta calmly as she followed her sister into the warm sitting room. "How are you, Elsie? I haven't got finished those pillowcases yet?"

"This is the last one," answered Elsie, rising to offer her hand to her sister. "When we saw you running, Aunt Alvaretta, we thought something had happened." She resumed her own seat and bent her fair head above the muslin pillowcase.

"Something unusual did happen," averred Miss Lee with mysterious nods of her head. "I'll have to take off my knit hood; it's gotten all set out in this room. For the land—er, I'll have to take off my knit hood. Well, I'll have to take off my knit hood. When I was cleaning the garage this morning."

"Gamaliel," called Mrs. Parsons impatiently as she picked up her needle and twisted furiously at some white lace when she was making for her daughter.

Miss Lee resumed her sweeping cap and twirled it thoughtfully on one long finger as her black eyes twinkled. Elsie's downcast face as she told her story.

"As I was saying, I cleaned the garage this morning, or I was just beginning when I decided I'd clean out that little closet under the rafters. There was a little scrap of lace that belonged to Grandmother Lee, and it had all sorts of truck in it. I won't tell you all the stuff there was tucked away. But among other things there was a little postcard box and inside of it was a little scrap of lace that belonged to Grandmother Lee. That was your great-grandmother, Elsie! There was a scrap of the wedding cover that went spread up in a little piece of paper was this bit of Grandmother's wedding cake!" Alvaretta triumphantly held up a twist of yellowed paper, which she carefully unfolded to discover a morsel of dark, fruity cake with a few flecks of icing clinging to it.

"I'm going to give it to Elsie to dream on," said Miss Lee slowly. Elsie's pale face flushed hotly and she shrank back in her chair with a protesting gesture of her hands. "You needn't laugh at me, Aunt Alvaretta," she said triumphantly. "I know I won't have to dream on wedding cake—my fate's been decided for me!" She shot a bitter glance at her mother's averted face.

Mrs. Parsons arose and went to the plant stand in the window, where she proceeded to pick the dead leaves from the geraniums with quick, nervous gestures that betrayed her inward perturbation.

"I didn't know Elsie had decided she was going to marry Jerome Barclay. I thought she was sort of teetering between him and that fellow who pursued Miss Alvaretta, getting upon her feet. I've never taken much stock in your notion of having Elsie get her wedding clothes ready before she's made up her mind."

"I never said I was going to marry Jerome Barclay. I—I can't bear him!" said Elsie. "I want to marry Jerome. He said Mrs. Parsons turned a cold face to her daughter. "I thought it was you who were to marry Jerome. He said wouldn't take 'no' for an answer, and he says you can keep him all day. You wouldn't do any work you don't want to. He can't afford to have you live like a lady. He left a diamond ring to you to wear, and he told me to be ahead and get the clothes ready. He says he knows you will be ready. I don't want to influence you, Elsie, but I've had a good deal to say about it. I couldn't have you let such a good chance go by." She looked appealingly at the mistress of her daughter's fate.

"I wouldn't mind working hard for some folks," said Elsie, bowed the girl, turning her eyes away. Mrs. Parsons sighed and resumed her picking of the dead leaves from the geraniums. "I don't know that Rob had given you the chance to say yes or no," she said bitterly. "Fideliesticks!" snarled Miss Alvaretta. "I don't know that Rob and Elsie know whether they want to marry each other without any blighting talk about it. Rob Barclay is poor, but he's smart as a whip and bound to make his mark in the world. He's got more ginger in his little finger than Jerome Barclay has in his whole lazy body. I don't believe in interfering with other folk's business, and I shan't influence Elsie at all, but I think it's only fair she should have a chance, and here it is."

Miss Alvaretta held out the bit of wedding cake in its twisted paper and dropped it in her niece's outstretched hand. "Elsie Parsons, you take that cake and put it under your pillow to dream on. If you don't like Jerome Barclay you can take it that's your fate to marry him and nobody else. If you dream of anybody else, it's your duty to marry them when they are. There! I've got to be going. Gamaliel will be wanting his share."

With a pressure of Elsie's hand and a defiant glance at the still disapproving back of her sister, Miss Alvaretta rushed out of the room.

When she had disappeared through the aisles of leafless trees, Mrs. Parsons turned around. "I hope you're not so stupid as to say anything to that foolishness, Elsie."

"Mother, I'm going to have my chance," she said quietly. "I'll promise to stand by whatever I dream about tonight. If I dream about Jerome Barclay I'll tell you the truth."

"I'll do the best I can for you, Elsie, whichever way you happen to dream," said Mrs. Parsons after a long pause.

"Thank you, mother," said Elsie, and she talked of other things. Elsie and Elsie's lovers were not mentioned again that afternoon.

After supper there came a something of a lull in the side of the house. Gamaliel, and Elsie as she knew to admit Miss Alvaretta's big black cake, suppose has come over to spend the night."

"The most ungrateful critter that ever lived," remarked Mrs. Parsons as she tucked a saucer of milk for Elsie, "is that fellow. 'Alvaretta waits on that cat hand and foot and five nights out of the week he runs over her head. I shoudn't think you'd want him sleeping in your room, Elsie."

"While she undressed Elsie thought of the wedding cake and of what she might dream while its magic lay after her head, but she forgot it after she was asleep. I shoudn't think you'd want him sleeping in your room, Elsie."

The Coffee Combine

In this issue we publish a summary of an article dealing with the advance in the price of coffee. The article it question appeared in Pearson's and we have reason to believe sets forth actual conditions in a fair and unprejudiced manner. We all of us realize that there is little or no sentiment in the amassing of great wealth but it does seem unfortunate that dollars could be loaned upon a project the object of which is to increase the burden of the poor. All of us are quite willing to pay the laborer that which is his due and we never hesitate when paying a price for coffee that we have reason to believe gave the grower a fair profit. But we certainly object to paying tribute and unjust profits to financiers who advanced money to finance this pick pocket project. Apparently there is little hope of a permanent drop in the price of coffee, and all that we can expect for a few years is an occasional drop in price, effective only for a short time, and allowed merely to hoodwink the public into believing that there is no coffee combine.—Trade Gazette.

Canada's Loss On

Pulpwood—1910

The exportation of pulpwood in a raw form from Canada into the United States is increasing yearly, and by just so much as this is so does Canada lose the benefits to be derived from manufacture and the increased value of raw products.
The Forestry Branch of the Interior has compiled statistics showing that over a million and a half cords of pulpwood were cut in Canada during 1910, worth nearly nine million, eight hundred thousand dollars. Over sixty per cent of this amount was sent out of Canada without further labor being expended on it. The United States manufactured it into pulp and paper. From United States Forest Products Bulletins, it is seen that approximately two-fifths of the pulpwood imported by that country is manufactured into mechanical pulp, and three-fifths into sulphite pulp, and that a cord of wood produces one ton of mechanical pulp or one-half ton of chemical pulp.

This means that of the nine hundred and forty three thousand cords of Canadian pulpwood sent into the United States in 1910, three hundred and seventy seven thousand tons of mechanical pulp and two hundred and eighty three thousand tons of chemical pulp were made.
The value of this pulp, for which Canada received six million, two hundred ten thousand dollars as pulpwood, was over thirteen and a half million dollars at the average prices paid in 1910 by United States importers of pulpwood. Thus Canada did not get one half the amount she would have received if all pulpwood were converted into pulp in Canadian soil. As the United States does not export two per cent of what it imports, a certain and steady market would be found for all the wood pulp of Canadian production.
